"An urban voice that grows". Those are the words that El Diario, the largest Spanish language newspaper in New York City, uses to describe Soulsa. Soulsa is a Latin group made up of five New Yorkers from different musical backgrounds. The group brings a new mix of rock and the danceable rhythms of salsa.

A good idea, considering the fact that today's Latin music is expanding in all different directions. The group was formed in 1999 in Washington Heights, NY., a neighborhood known for its embrace on Latin music.

Soulsa contains all the energy of a rock group combined with the sensuality and elegance of today's salsa bands. This pleases the public, both Latino and non-Latino alike. The absence of piano and brass manages to give the band a less traditional sound, while the guitar brings in a harder edge. The band prides itself in bringing something different and new to the public and totally dedicates itself to the development of its music.

Soulsa has played various clubs in New York City like The Nuyorican Poets Café and have performed at private events for such names as Oscar de la Renta, Ralph Lauren, Nike Sports, and VOGUE magazine. They've also had their music played on Latin radio stations such as WBAI 99.5FM and recently did a live show for WRSU 88.7FM. The group has recently released a 5 song CD, which can be obtained by e-mailing them at: grafix175@aol.com
